“Abraham Rempel is a Canadian, Mennonite-Anabaptist, happily married father of two, Brock University graduate in Classical Studies, retired business man, wannabe golfer, and an avid reader with a life long goal to write. This is his first book.”

Topic: Millions and Millions: A Modern Myth

“A common sense approach to the age of the Earth”

The story is told about a not-so-famous “autodidact” who learned how to be a plumber by reading every manual he could find. Next he undertook to learn scuba diving because his basement had flooded. Most of what I learned came from self-study. I have a well-honed personal library of Biblical studies, histories both ancient and modern, and the sciences, natural science and cosmology. A true autodidact, or should I say plumber.
